'This body of work began on a visit to Athens. My family is Greek and whilst I've been a few times, I wanted to see what was happening now. From my room I could hear the speeches and music from the demonstrations. The downtown streets teemed with people of all nationalities. The queue at the Acropolis snaked for miles. In between it all Athenians went about their business, much as I imagine they've done and will do for thousands of years.'

Dean Manning is a musician and self taught artist. This is his 4th solo show. He has been a finalist in the Sulman & Blake prizes as well as participating in group exhibitions at the Benalla, Lake Macquarie & Tweed River Regional Galleries. His work is held in the collections of Artbank & Deakin University.
